Centre for Transcultural Research and Media Practice School of Media, Dublin Institute of Technology

The Centre for Transcultural Research and Media Practice (TRMP) is a research and postgraduate unit dedicated to the enrichment of scholarly and public understandings of transnational migration and globalisation, to new forms of citizenship and transcultural relations and histories. The Centre's aim is to develop an interface between media led research, public policy/education and civil society activism. Combining production in social documentary film, photography, radio and new media with applied social research, the Centre identifies media practice as a catalyst for opening dialogue about social inclusion in collaboration with organisations and representatives of civil society.
